WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- High pressure over California will produce a dry and hot weather pattern through the weekend and into early next week.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

- <https://alerts-v2.weather.gov/counties/CA>

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Hot and Very Dry with Poor Overnight RH Recovery and Light Offshore Winds Mid and Upper Slopes Coastal Range through Monday. Strengthening high pressure will produce hot and dry conditions throughout the North Ops region through Tuesday. The marine layer will be shallow and only areas along the immediate coast will get relief from the hot and dry weather. Poor humidity recovery (to 20-30%) will be common on mid and upper slopes, especially in the coastal range where light offshore winds will prevail during nights and mornings. Afternoon temperatures will be 10-15 degrees above normal with RH dropping to 7-17%. Air quality will further diminish due to stable conditions and stagnant air, especially in valleys and canyons near active fires.

Beyond Tuesday models are not in agreement. There is a chance that a weak low pressure trough may move in Wednesday and moderate the hot and dry weather a bit, with thunderstorms possible from the Cascade-Sierra crest east. Other solutions show less impact from a weak low pressure trough, followed by more high pressure and hot and dry weather.

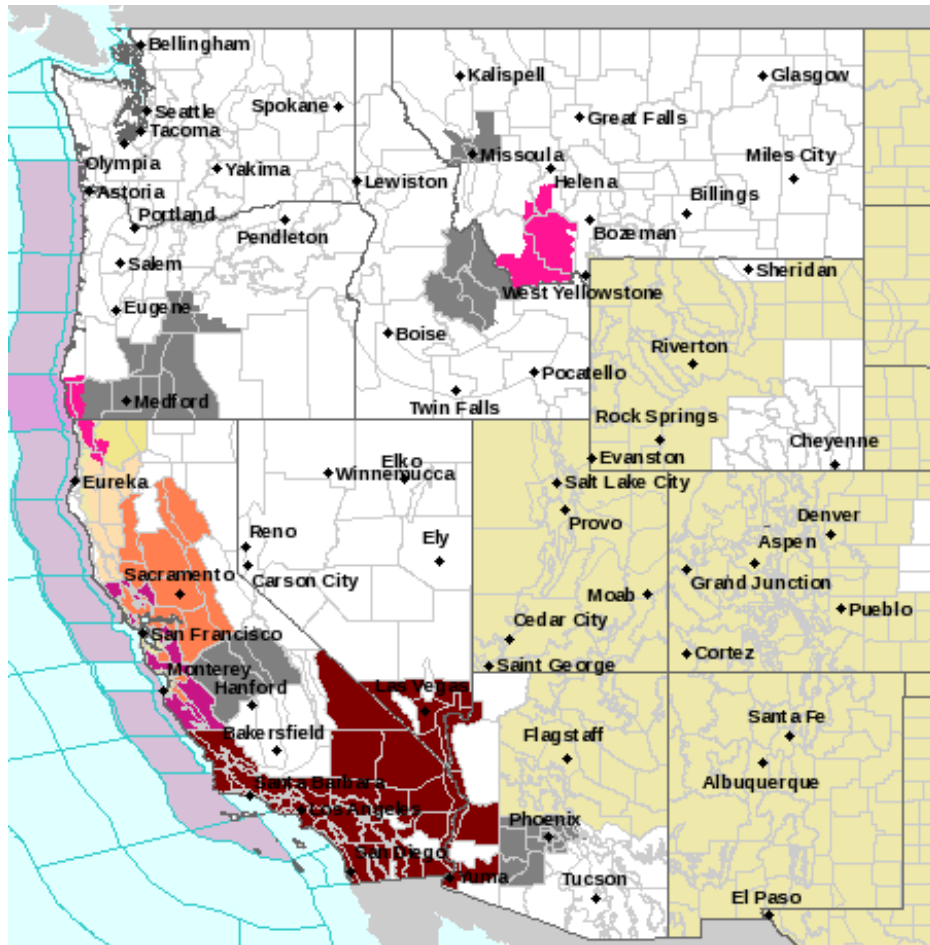

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Hot Saturday through the end of next week.

Isolated showers and thunderstorms will form over the Sierra Crest and the deserts bordering Nevada and Arizona this afternoon as a weak area of low pressure continues to spin off the Southern California Coast. Temperatures will warm a few degrees and minimum humidity will drop to 15% to 30% today as high pressure moves northward out of Mexico to the Four Corners Area. Maximum temperatures will be in the 80s to low 90s across the mountains and 90s to 102 in the valleys today. Hot and dry conditions will occur this weekend as strong high pressure sets up over the Great Basin. Temperatures will be above 100 degrees across the valleys and foothills and minimum humidity will be mainly in the teens. Well above normal temperatures will continue across the region through the end of next week as the area of high pressure remains stationary. Minimum humidity will slowly rise next week as southeast flow aloft brings increasing monsoonal moisture into the region. Isolated afternoon showers and thunderstorms will occur over the Sierra and over the mountains and deserts of Southern California east of I-15 early next week. Afternoon thunderstorms will increase in number and become more widespread Wednesday through the end of next week.
